

Daniel Kwon MD

Daniel Kwon MD, is an Assistant Professor of Otolaryngology at Keck School of Medicine at USC. He is fellowship-trained in head and neck cancer, robotic surgery, and microvascular reconstruction. He has a busy clinical practice focusing on oral cancers, free flap microvascular reconstruction, and thyroid/parathyroid surgery. He co-directs the USC Thyroid Center and helps lead the Thyroid Cancer program at the Children's Hospital of Los Angeles.

He has published dozens of journal articles and book chapters on research topics related to thyroid surgery, head and neck cancer, and wound healing. He completed his medical degree and residency at Loma Linda University, Loma Linda, CA and his head and neck cancer fellowship at Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, NY.